

SUPPORT ASKED FOR LIBRARY; GOES TO FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Town Council Not Ready to Place Itself on Record as Setting Aside One Mill for Maintenance Coming Year.

BOARD OF HEALTH'S REPORT.

They Asked $880 to Run Their Affairs the Coming Year—Howard Anderson Elected to Police Force in Frank McCudden's Place—List of Bills Paid and Reports Made.

Borough Council last night refused to pass a resolution providing one mill appropriation out of the general fund for the Carnegie Free Library when the levy for 1907 is fixed. H. F. Ender, Secretary of the Library Trustees, addressed the Council explaining the necessity of the appropriation and the amounts of money that had previously been appropriated. According to his figures, an amount in excess of $3,000 had been appropriated by the Town Council from the general fund, but this amount was given in lump sum and did not represent a mill by general ordinance or dollars. He went over the ordinance passed in 1901 providing for the maintenance of the library and compared the appropriations of the School Board to those of the Borough Council. The former has contributed more to the support of the library than the latter.

Mr. Snyder said: "It is absolutely necessary for the Trustees to have an appropriation of one mill. We don't want that amount to conduct the library extravagantly, but books wear out and it is absolutely necessary to get a few new ones each year, and with the general operating expenses you will see that we are not asking too much. We need this appropriation to pay necessary expenses and keep out of debt. We ask for the full appropriation this year."

Mr. Stillwagon offered a motion that when the levy is made one mill be set aside for library purposes and that the money be placed in a separate fund to be known as the "Library Fund." Mr. Friel immediately amended the motion, referring it to the Finance Committee. Mr. Millard seconded the motion. A vote was taken on the amendment and it resulted: For, Girard, Millard, Friel, Huston and Porter; against, Stillwagon, McCormick and Dean.

As President Porter was about to place the original motion before the Council, Mr. Huston objected, declaring that the amendment became the original motion. There were several parliamentary discussions between the members, but President Porter finally decided to place the motion carrying the provision for the one mill. Stillwagon, McCormick and Dean voted for it and the other five members against it. This ended the library appropriation, and the papers now rest securely with the Finance Committee.

Councilman Friel went on record as being opposed to creating a fire department with as many volunteers as at present. He favored six fire policemen instead of four and said that in his opinion the volunteers were but little good, anyhow. Councilman Dean defended the volunteers, stating that he frequently found that they turned out in goodly numbers and it was necessary to have them. President Porter was also for the volunteers, but he said that he thought five good men from each ward would be enough along with the paid men. This would make a company of 24 men, instead of 45 at present. He said that to haul the small hose carriages it was necessary to have volunteers. Although it was thought that the fire police question would be settled last night the question was finally dropped without action being taken.

Councilman Girard stated that there were many complaints about loose papers, hand bills and circulars flying about on the streets. He said that the W. C. T. U. suggested putting garbage cans about if the Council would clean them instead. It was suggested that the Council purchase a "white" wagon and have a street cleaner to gather up the waste paper. It was finally decided to make the bill posting ordinance more rigid and to get one of the wagons and make a trial of the system.

granting an appropriation to the Health Board for expenses during the coming year. The law requires the Health Board to make annual reports of its expenses at the end of the fiscal year to estimate the appropriation necessary for the conduct of the Board's business during the coming year. The Board estimated its expenses for the year at $880. Action on the appropriation was deferred by referring the matter to the Finance Committee. George B. Brown, Secretary of the Board, submitted the following report:

In accordance with the Act of Assembly approved May 13, 1893, we hereby submit the following report of the receipts and disbursements of the Board of Health for the year ending March 31, 1907, with an estimate of the probable receipts and expenditures for the year beginning April 1, 1907.

Bills to the amount of $990.52 were read. Councilman Stillwagon objected to the payment of $25 to Carl Bishop for services as a fireman. Bishop worked for Arch Huston while he was ill. Huston was not able to do all the work, but was allowed his full time. Mr. Stillwagon also objected to the payment of Joseph H. Hall $58 for work. He claimed that a portion of the work was done with borough property, stating that Hall's horses were horses owned by the borough. The bills were passed, however. Mr. Stillwagon wanted to know how the Council could pay $600 in bills with $562.96 in the fund. Rev. Huston said that provision had been made and that a bank would pay them. Mr. Stillwagon said that the minority members of Council had a right to know the method of paying the bills. They didn't get much satisfaction, but later on in the meeting a motion was made to authorize the Finance Committee to borrow $400 to meet the expense of the bills.

and allows from Apple street a Frank avenue into one first class thoroughfare. Mr. Hogg also presented the profile of Patterson avenue from Sycamore to Isabella street over which the grade will be established. He submitted the plan of Patterson street to the village with the idea of widening and paving this street. All the plans and papers in the matters were referred to the Street Committee and Borough Solicitor.

Howard Anderson, who was displaced from the office when the new Council organized, was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Officer McCudden.

Borough Solicitor J. W. Huston was directed to prepare an ordinance extending the fire limits from Redwin avenue south to Green street 120 feet on each side of Pittsburg street, also from Prospect street south to Church street, east to East alley, north to Orchard street and west to Mountain alley to connect with the original fire line. This takes in much valuable property.

Councilman Huston reported that only one set of plans had been received for the fire house. There are three plans in evidence, but it seems they cannot be located.

The Public Safety Committee was directed to proceed with expediting the fire house so that it will operate readily. Mr. Pass, who installed the whistle, will superintend the job and install several other whistles. A direct steam line will be built from the Pittsburg Brewing Company's boilers. It is said to obviate the difficulty.

An application for six vacant lots presented by between 30 and 40 property owners of the Fourth Ward was accepted and the matter will be taken up by the Sewer Committee. The sewer are needed in that part of the Fourth Ward along Newberry avenue and Vine street and parts of Sycamore and Davidson avenues. After the petition had been presented Council later in the evening discussed the matter and a petition will be drawn up by Borough Solicitor Brown that will be an appeal to the citizens of that portion of town and Council providing for the improvement asked.

A motion was passed that all bills must be in the hands of the Finance Committee at least two days before the meetings of Council.

GROUND TO DEATH IN B. & O. YARDS.

Frank Macuso, Night Switch Watchman, Knocked Beneath Moving Train

HE HAD TRIED TO AVOID.

Stepped Off Main Line Track in front of Shifter Which Hurlled Him Under Foot. Pleasant Freight—Carried to Hospital Where He Died.

Death claimed another victim in the Connellville yards of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad early this morning when Frank Macuso, for the past several years night switch watchman in the upper yards, was ground beneath an engine and six cars almost in front of the Trans-Allegany Hotel.

Macuso was looking after the switches when Engine No. 1221 came up the eastbound main line track with a string of cars from the Mt. Pleasant branch. He stepped off the track to let the train go by, walking directly in front of engine No. 1018. The No. 1018 struck Frank and knocked him under the No. 1221. His body was badly cut up.

He was taken to the Cottage State Hospital where he died a short time later. His body was removed this morning to the undertaking establishment of J. L. Snider, where it was prepared for burial. Macuso lived in Dutch Bottom. He was an Italian.

The Lunacy Commission This Afternoon Will Subject Him to a Physical Test.

Publishers Press Telegram. NEW YORK, Apr. 3.—A private examination of Harry Thaw will be made today by the Lunacy Commission, during which he will be subjected to physical tests conducted by Dr. Fugel, the assistant member of the Board. This examination will be made today following an examination by other alienist witnesses.

The report of the Commission, which will either mean a continuance of the trial or sending Thaw to Matteawan, will be made tomorrow.

There was a big assemblage of alienists on hand at the hearing today. Drs. White, Dietendorf and Wagner are to be examined. Thaw came into court early. He looked well and did not appear worried over the prospects of the finding of the Lunacy Board later in the day. Dr. Dietendorf was the first witness, and gave his opinion that Thaw was not capable of understanding the proceedings against him or to advise his counsel.

Mrs. Louis Deuvali Seeks Legal Separation After Marriage of Only Six Months—Foreigner Pummels His Wife and Gets into Trouble—Powder Hearings Resumed.

UNIONTOWN, Apr. 3.—When the County Commissioners next week conclude their work as a court of appeals from assessment valuations they will then turn their attention to making an equitable adjustment of coal values. Vast discrepancies now exist and it is the intention of the Commissioners to alter this. An example of the manner in which coal is being assessed in the various districts is shown by a few of the returns. The prices given is the assessment per acre:

Luzerne$225
George 275
German 300
South Union 400
Redstone 400
North Union 500
Jefferson 600
Luzerne, one of the richest townships in the county, and Redstone adjoin, but there is a difference of $175 an acre in the valuation. There is also a vast difference between the assessments in Jefferson township and those of Luzerne. It is the intent of the Commissioners to equalize these figures. The coal owners are naturally anxious to have the assessed valuation of their property placed as low as possible. The H. C. Frick Coke Company, which owns coal in practice, anxious to have the values uniform. This work will take the Commissioners a good while, but they hope to have it figured out in a satisfactory manner as soon as possible.

After having married but six short months, Mrs. Louis Deuvali, of Uniontown, wants to be separated from her husband, Edwin M. Deuvali. She claims cruel and abusive treatment, and gives, as her last and most conclusive reason why a divorce should be granted her, the fact that he hit her over the head with a piece of egg and spoiled a new frock. They were married in Uniontown October 2, 1906, and are well known here. Mrs. Deuvali states in her libel that her husband has pestered the life out of her trying to get her to sell a house and let she owns and in which they live. She refuses to do so. She says he has worked just 34 days since being married. He quarrels with her, accuses her of infidelity, threatens to take his life and says he will leave her, but he never does so. While looking over the records in the Register and Recorder's office a few days ago she remarked to the clerks that married life like hers "is simply hell."

In the divorce case of George Clark against Margaret Clark, a rule has been issued on the libellant to show cause why he shouldn't pay his wife $5 a week and $75 counsel fees until the matter is permanently settled. Mrs. Clark says it was her husband and not her who deserted.

Mike Brown thought that because he moved to Pennsylvania that agreement he made in Chicago not to abuse his wife wouldn't be valid here, so a few days ago he pulled her hair, kicked and punched her, and did other grievous things to her. As a consequence Mike was committed to jail for assault and battery this morning by Squire John Boyle.

The hearings in the Fairchance powder cases were resumed this morning before Commissioner H. E. Detwiler and a number of witnesses are on hand to give testimony.

STRENUOUS IS DENIAL

Made by President Roosevelt to Statement Made in Harriman's Letter.

HARRIMAN STANDS BY THEM

Although He Says Letter Was Stolen and Published by Discharged Stenographer—Judge Alton B. Parker
Says "I Told You So."

New York, April 3.—A political sensation of large proportions has been sprung here by the publication of a letter purporting to have been written by E. H. Harriman to Mr. Sidney Webster, of this city. Mr. Webster is a lawyer and writer on political and financial topics. The letter was written in December, 1905, and gives interesting information concerning certain alleged contributions to the Republican campaign fund during the canvass of 1904.

In the letter, which Mr. Harriman later acknowledged as genuine, the writer gives an account of a visit he made to the White House during the campaign. The epistle is as follows:

Dear Sir—I am glad to see that you are in town, and hope soon to have an opportunity of talking matters over with you.

As to my political instincts, to which you refer in your letter of December 12, I am quite sure I have none, and my being made at all prominent to the political situation is entirely due to President Roosevelt, and because of my taking an active part in the autumn of 1904 at his request, and his taking advantage of conditions then created to further his own interests. If it had been a promissory note it could not have been better started or carried out.

About a week before the election in the autumn of 1904, when it looked certain that the state ticket would go Democratic and was as to Roosevelt himself, he, the President, sent me a request to go to Washington to confer upon the political conditions in New York state. I complied, and he told me he understood the campaign could not be carried on without sufficient money, and asked if I would help them in raising the necessary funds, as the national committee, under control of Chairman Cortelyou, had been utterly failed of obtaining them and there was a large amount due from them to the New York state committee.

Reluctance About Dewey.
I explained to him that I understood the difficulty here was mainly caused by the upstate leaders being unwilling to support Dewey for re-election as United States senator, and that if he, Dewey, could be taken care of in some other way I thought matters could be adjusted and the contending elements in the party brought into alliance again. We talked over what could be done for Dewey, and finally he agreed, if found necessary, he would appoint him an ambassador to Paris.

With full belief that he, the President, would keep this agreement, I came back to New York, sent for Treasurer Bliss, who told me that I was their last hope, and that they had exhausted every other resource. In his presence I called upon an intimate of Senator Dewey, told him that it was necessary to order carry that New York state that $200,000 should be raised at once, and if he would help I would subscribe $50,000. After a few words over the telephone the gentleman said he would let me know, which he did.

Checks Given to Bliss.
The checks were given to Treasurer Bliss, who took them to Chairman Cortelyou. If there were any among the list of life insurance companies or any other like organizations, of course Cortelyou must have informed the President. I do not know who the subscribers were, whether the friends of Dewey, who was an individual. This amount enabled the New York state committee to continue the work, with the result that at least 50,000 votes were turned in the city of New York alone, making a difference of 100,000 votes in the general result.

There are between 2,500 and 3,000 districts in Greater New York, and in campaign such as that the expenditure of, say, $50 in each district for campaign purposes, not including the watchers on election day, would take more than $100,000.

Sometimes in December, 1904, on my way from Virginia to New York, I stopped and had a short talk with the President. He then told me that he did not think it necessary to appoint Dewey as ambassador to Paris as agreed, in fact, he asked him for the senate. I had not expected that he was one up to what would be necessary, but he arrogated that to himself, and I, of course, could say nothing further. After that I used what influence I could to have Dewey returned to the senate, as I considered there had been an implied obligation which should be lived up to.

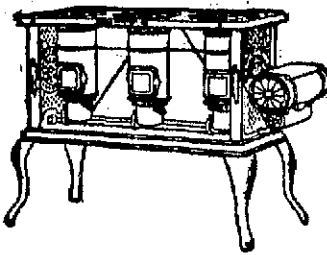

Acted as Private Citizen.
This is the way I was brought to the surface in the political matters, as I had never before taken any active part, and had only done what I could as my private citizen might, so you see I was brought forward by Roosevelt in an attempt to help him out, not to help him out, as I was in the insurance matter by Hyde and Ryan by their request for my help; and in the case of Ryan I probably would have dropped the matter after our first interview had it not been for my desire to save Belmont from taking a position for which he could have been criticized by the public press, as he was the one Ryan desired me to influence from opposing Morton for election as chairman of the Equitable board, and Belmont afterwards thanked me for taking his part, as if he had voted against Morton. In view of his local traction connections with Mr. Ryan, it would have been a most unfortunate situation.

Where do I stand?
Yours sincerely,
E. H. HARRIMAN.

Harriman Stands by Letter.
Mr. Harriman, in his statement of last evening, says:

"For many years I have maintained the utmost confidential correspondence with my friend, Mr. Sidney Webster. What I wrote him, and what he wrote me was, of course, intended for our eyes alone. In the course of a letter which he wrote me in December 1905 he warned me against being drawn into politics and questioned whether I had any political or party instinct united to what he was pleased to call my business instinct. This drew from me the reply to Mr. Webster's inquiry which, in a substantially correct form, has been stolen and published. This letter on January 2, 1906, at a time when no one could doubt the cordiality of my relations with the President.

"About ten days ago I was told that a discharged stenographer was trying to sell to some newspaper a reproduction from his notes of one of my private letters. I could hardly believe that any matter so obtained would be accepted or published, yet I made every effort to prevent it. When I learned that a New York newspaper had a transcript of these notes, I notified the publisher at once of the facts, and urged upon his attention the gross outrage that the publication of it under such circumstances would involve. While exploring, of course, that the sacredness of a private correspondence should thus be violated, I cannot withdraw anything in the letter."

The President's Denial.
Pittsburg, April 3.—The Washington correspondent of the Gazette Times wires his paper this morning as follows:

"Washington, April 3.—The president's denial is in the form of two letters written by him last October to James S. Sherman of New York, chairman of the Republican congressional campaign committee. At that time the report was abroad that Harriman had been making allegations similar to those contained in his letter published in a New York newspaper.

"Mr. Sherman came to Washington and talked it over with the president. When he left President Roosevelt sat down and wrote him a letter covering the ground completely. These communications were followed a few days later by another shorter letter not made public and when the Harriman letter was sprung, the president had only to submit copies of his letter to Sherman in refutation of Harriman's statements.

Harriman's Good Faith Doubted.
"It appears from the article accompanying the Harriman letter in its original publication that Mr. Harriman was very much annoyed when he learned that it was to be published and that he used every effort for his power to suppress it. But the city reader, who has followed closely the events of the past few months, who recalls the interstate commerce commission's investigation of the Harriman deals and who reflects upon the stubbornness with which these railroads have resisted the administration policy of governmental control, will harbor some doubts as to Mr. Harriman's desire to suppress the letter to Webster. In fact, there will be general suspicion that by some contrivance the copy of the letter was permitted to get into the hands of the newspaper that published it, and that with the purpose of casting reflections upon the motives of the president.

Must Produce the Proof.
"But whatever the motive that led to the publication of the Harriman letter it remains for the railroad magnate to furnish the proofs of his statements. President Roosevelt has made such a circumstantial denial of the allegations that nothing will convince the public of their truth but the most positive evidence. It is reported that Mr. Harriman has canceled checks which he will submit in evidence now that the issue of veracity is raised between him and the President. However, it will be noticed that President Roosevelt does not deny that Harriman contributed to the campaign fund. He says nothing whatever on that point. What he does deny most emphatically is that he requested Harriman to act as solicitor to raise funds for the national committee."

charge made in the 1904 campaign, that the great corporation interests were largely financing the Republican campaign. Last night he issued the following statement:

What Judge Parker Thinks.
"That $150,000 was turned over to Mr. Cortelyou's committee by the Equitable, Mutual and New York Life insurance companies, has never been denied, of course. It was testified to under oath before a body which could have summoned Mr. Bliss and Mr. Cortelyou to the witness stand if it had been denied. It is safe to deny Mr. Harriman's statement, because there is not a committee before whom Mr. Bliss and Mr. Cortelyou and other persons can be summoned and compelled to testify. Congress has refused to make an investigation of the corporate contributions of 1904 or to pass a law prohibiting corporate contributions in the future. The money raised by Mr. Harriman and contributed by the life insurance companies aggregating $350,000 was but a drop in the bucket as compared with the total contributions by railroads and other great corporations."

Large Class Is Being Examined for Mine Foreman's Certificate at Scott-dale This Week—Andrew Hawthorne Sustained Dangerous Injuries.

SCOTSDALE, Apr. 3.—Alexander McClaren, Jr., mine inspector for the Eleventh District of Pennsylvania, assisted by P. P. Glenn of Scottsdale and William Duncan of Mt. Pleasant, began on Tuesday the examination of candidates for the position of mine foreman, the examination lasting over Wednesday and Thursday, with Friday set apart for examination for fire bosses. The examination is held this year, as usual, in the Grand Army band room in the borough building. A new feature will be the oral examination of the successful candidates at some later date to be announced, which will also take place here instead of at a mine. The examination will be in the explosive, gas, and natural gas will be used in the examination and demonstration, the Mine Inspector having an apparatus for that purpose. The examination will also include one on the preparation and care of a mine's safety lamp. The following were the members of the class for mine foreman's certificates: Ernest Krause, R. F. D. 26, Connelville; Frank Strickler, R. F. D. 31, Dawson; James Benard, Tarry; David L. Brown, Meyer; Dennis Mahony, Calumet; J. M. Casey, South-west, Hecla No. 1; Randall Adams, R. F. D. 3, Irwin; F. P. Roth, R. F. D. 5, Greensburg; J. L. Burley, R. F. D. 6, Greensburg; W. L. Ainsley, Scottsdale; Charles Pringle, Mammoth; Alex. Lawson, Mammoth; Martin Shopsky, R. F. D. 5, Greensburg; Henry Lowther, United; Jules Schlinger, R. F. D. 26, Connelville; John Tully, Tanager; Albert G. Myers, R. F. D. 7, Greensburg; Harry E. Kooser, Mammoth; A. W. Whippley, Mammoth; Thomas Sheridan and James Ferguson, Hermina.

Kinokla Tribe No. 471, Improved Order of Red Men, will light the Council fire in their wigwag tonight and install their officers for the year, in Malta Hall, in the Elber & Graft building, at 7:30 o'clock. The following are the officers to be installed: Prophet, Walter Haines; Sachem, William Longacker; Senior Sagamore, Walter Arvin; Junior Sagamore, John Mentzer; Keeper of Records, Robert E. McFarland; Keeper of Wampum, Clifford Hagerman; Trustee, E. G. Wentzler. Kinokla Tribe is a strong and progressive one, that is growing rapidly.

You understand, the Family Theatre is the new name for the old operation on Pittsburg street, Connelville.

H. C. Allen, representing the Pittsburgh, McKeesport & Greensburg Railway Company, was down from Greensburg Tuesday afternoon and delivered to the borough the written acceptance of that company, signed by President L. B. Hunt, to the ordinance passed by Council March 1, granting the company the rights and privileges to build and operate a street car line through the town. With the written acceptance was the bond of the company in the sum of $5,000 to save and keep harmless the borough from any damages, and to insure the proper carrying out of the contract. Mr. Allen speaks hopefully of the prospect of getting to work on the construction of the line at an early date.

There was quite a pleasant surprise party tendered Mrs. William E. Henry of Loucks avenue on Saturday evening by a number of her friends of the neighborhood, the occasion being the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Henry. The affair was a total surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Henry and an elegant supper was a feature of the evening. Frank McFarland, Connelville, who was elected Chief of Police by Council at its meeting on Monday evening, assumed his duties today, being sworn in by Burgess William Ferguson. John P. Nugent and Austin Hyde are the night officers, and began their turn on Tuesday night.

M. P. Porter and J. Lester Porter went to Pittsburg on a business trip today.

A trip through Yellowstone Park at the Arcade this evening.

Andrew Hawthorne, a well known business man, was severely injured at Elverson on Monday afternoon while getting off a West Penn car on Brown street. He fell and sustained a deep laceration on his head, and was carried into a nearby house, where Dr. M. A. Noon dressed his wound. Mr. Hawthorne, about a year ago, while at the station loading goods from a freight car into a wagon, was caught when the horse suddenly threw itself back on the shafts, catching Mr. Hawthorne between the end of the wagon and the door of the car, fracturing his skull.

A good deal of meanness is felt about here regarding the prospects for fruit this season, which seems badly blighted by the freezing weather of the last couple of nights. The buds and blossoms were well started. A. J. Felgar, a west of town farmer said Tuesday that the freeze was so hard the night before that ice was frozen on a water trough that easily bore his weight.

of and what Alexander Marshall was arrested for. Alex. disclaims all knowledge of the dog's death, and will try to prove an alibi. Interesting developments are expected.

One of the first signs of warm weather came last night when the Greensburg Business Men's Association took up the matter of a summer outing. Their affairs have been held here for a number of years and have always been very enjoyable affairs. Idlewild is usually the place selected, although the merchants are not adverse to trying a new place. Shady Grove park, in Fayette county, has been suggested and is favored by some members of the organization. Action will not be definitely taken, however, for a number of days yet.

By an opinion recently handed down by Judge McConnell, the Pittsburgh McKeesport & Greensburg Railway wins an important step in the controversy with Irwin borough. This decision gives the railway company the right to operate cars over the big viaduct recently built by them on private right of way purchased from Thomas Irwin. About 400 feet of this viaduct is in Irwin Borough, and the Town Council got out an injunction to restrain the company from running cars over it without a franchise. They still compel the company to transfer passengers over a square in the business portion of town.

"Big Bill" Powell, who stands 6 feet 3 in. in stockings and is the best "center" in the Central Basketball League, will play ball with the Greensburg West Penn Club this year. Bill had a non-reserve contract with the East End Y. M. C. team for this season, but has decided not to return to the Pottery town and will wear a Greensburg uniform. He made his debut in professional basketball at Bloomington, Ill., with the I. T. League, when he fielded 383 and batted .310.

READY! Come, Spring Housefurnishers, and See How Well We've Prepared for You.

A few real Spring days have had their effect on this business, and now we've cast off our moorings and swung out into the mid-stream of what is sure to be this big carpet and furniture house's biggest season's trade. We have prepared for more business and we doubt not one whit that it will come.

The feeling of confidence with which our patrons make purchases is the strongest kind of a tribute to this establishment and its methods of operation. There's confidence in this store's merchandise—in the most modest priced lines as well as the finer and most luxurious. There's confidence in qualities here, the deep-rooted brand of confidence. And then our prices. The wage earner, and the man of means as well, know that they can positively buy here to better advantage than elsewhere. Now, if you do not know these things through experience, you owe it to yourself to investigate, and you have a standing invitation to look, you know.

If you are moving into a new home or refurnishing the old one, we can save you money without sacrificing appearance or comfort. Let us beautify your home. With larger and more varied stocks than ever before, we are ready for the Spring season of 1907.

Bright Spring Carpet Patterns.

In a wealth of colorings and fabrics that cannot be equaled in Connelville. In fact there are very few cities the size of ours in the State that can boast such a showing.

Tapestry Brussels Carpets

A popular line that's eminently satisfactory. The patterns and colors carry the earmarks of highest priced fabrics, being reproductions of the newest designs. Patterns for hall or stairs as well as for rooms; plenty of choice, too. Price, per yard, $1.00 and $1.10. Then we have good wearing qualities at 85c and 90c, and others still lower in price.

The Famous Ingrains

In our great line of All-Wool Ingrains at 75c and 85c we show all the new patterns in the best colorings, the latter being particularly adapted to the latest in wall papers.

Then we have All-Wool Filling Ingrains (colors guaranteed fast) in a variety of patterns suitable for any room, at 58c and 63c. Still lower priced ones, desirable for bed rooms, where wear is not so severe, at 30c to 48c.

As Usual We Will Sew, Lay, and Line Carpets Free of Charge

Room Rugs $1.50 to $36. Brimful of new designs in the many grades. The 9x12 size retains its prestige because of its general utility. However our lines of larger and smaller sizes are complete, and for chance your size is not here our facilities for making special sizes or odd shapes were never better. Including Tapestry, Brussels, Velvets, Body Brussels, Axminsters, Saraks, American Orientals and Wiltons.

Great Furniture Assortment.

Yes, they are larger than this store ever before exhibited, but with heavy buying they're bound to dwindle, and "first buyers get first choice" was never more in point. Make your selections this week. We'll store without charge and deliver when you direct.

In a banking service is a difficult attainment, but not an impossible one. It characterizes the service of the Second National Bank. Every precaution is taken as to safety. Every investment made has the wise and careful consideration not of one man or power but of the board of directors. Loans are made with prudence and care. It is impossible for a bank to be so successful.

The Second National Bank of Connelville

Why You Should Bank Here.

A bank is what its directors make it—its strength depends largely upon their experience, judgment and responsibility—their growth upon the time, thought and effort they devote to it. The directors of this bank are well-known business men of this city, large holders of the bank's stock, therefore deeply interested in its stability and progress. They keep in constant touch with its affairs by constant meetings. This is one feature to be considered when selecting a banking house.

A MAKER OF HISTORY

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM,
Author of "The Master Mummer," "A Prince of Sinners," "Mysterious Mr. Sablin," "Anna the Adventuress," Etc.

Copyright, 1905, 1906, by LITTLE, BROWN, and COMPANY.

"Monsieur talks reasonably," he declared, "but why all this mystery? Why this feigned drunkenness? Why the show of arms? If you can help me, I am at your service. I am at your service, and I choose to make a present to these ladies in return, why, no doubt they will be charmed. Me, I presume, he has no intention to insult. Permit me, monsieur."

He drew a card from a small gold case and presented it to Duncome, who accepted it with a little bow. "I invited you into a private room here," he continued, "if I can aid you in any way I am entirely at your service, but I require first of all that in addressing you you recognize my position as a French nobleman, who assumes himself in this place as you, monsieur, also do, and also that you unlock that door."

Duncome smiled quietly. "Monsieur le Baron," he said, "I think that we are very well as we are—secure from interruption. I have Duncome was master of the situation, and he did not succeed. Both of these ladies, I believe, have been approached for the information I desire, and they have thought well to withhold it. I have set my heart upon success this time, and I wish to secure at least the opportunity of being heard."

M. Louis shrugged his shoulders. "There are secrets," he murmured, "affairs of honor."

Duncome interrupted him. "M. Louis," he said, "I am not so young as I look, and I have lived in Paris. I know that this café for all its outward smartness bears perhaps the worst reputation in Europe. I have heard of you three many times—the 'trinity' from Holt, they call you sometimes, I think. You see, I know where I am and the risk I run. Even this little room has its secrets—a murder or two, I believe, and other things—secrets which I don't suppose there is gold enough in France to buy. Well, I don't want to buy them. You can go your way so far as I am concerned. There is only one thing I want to know from you, and for that I offer you—the ladies, of course, I mean—5,000 francs each."

"Five thousand francs?" Madame murmured.

Mlle. Flossie said nothing, but her eyes shone.

"The question is, monsieur," "What has become of Mlle. Phyllis Poynton, the young English lady?"

The eyes of Madame seemed to narrow for a moment. M. Louis lit a cigarette with fingers which shook a little, and the fair face of Mlle. Flossie was suddenly white. Then they all three looked at one another.

"Do you know whom monsieur may mean?"

"Not I."

"An English girl? There are none come here."

"Mlle. Poynton? It is a name unheard of."

The young Englishman smiled upon them calmly.

"Madame," he said, "you have in your satchel—don't move, if you please—a roll of French notes—indeed you must not move—very cleverly abstracted from my pocket by my charming young companion, Mlle. Flossie here. Now, I have at least half a dozen friends in the café below whom I could ransom here by touching that bell, and the identification of those notes would be a perfectly simple matter. Shall I do it, or will you even another roll by giving me the information I seek?"

Madame leaned forward and whispered in the man's ear. M. Louis nodded.

"Tell him," Mlle. Flossie murmured emphatically. "Monsieur will not break faith with us. He will not let it be known from whence he gained the knowledge."

"Agreed," the young Englishman declared. "So do you."

Madame held up her hand. "I," she said, "will tell monsieur what we know."

She rose to her feet and leaned over the table. The blue black sequins on her dress glittered and shone in the dull light. Her figure was superb, her neck and bosom a flawless white. The Englishman, however, was unmoved. His keen, gray eyes were fixed upon her, but the revolver remained in his right hand. From downstairs they could hear the music of violins and laughter. Madame frowned slightly as she marked the young Englishman's alertness. She was used to victims, and his imperturbability annoyed her.

"I trust," she said, "that you will remember, monsieur, that I am breathing a pledged word. If monsieur the director here knew that I was telling you of Mlle. Poynton there would be much trouble for all of us."

Duncome nodded. "Go on," he said.

"Mademoiselle came here first about a month or perhaps six weeks ago," she said. "From that time on she was a regular visitor. She came alone. She spoke to no one. She was always a mystery. She was always handsomely dressed—for an English girl, quite chic. She spent money, and M. Alfred, the director, kept always a table for her. As time went on we began to feel the mystery. We asked ourselves for what purpose does she come here? For what, indeed?"

"One night M. Alfred, who was always besieged with questions about her, took too much wine. I have seen what happens with him but once, and that time never. He told us about mademoiselle. She made some inquiries, and M. Alfred was able to tell her his whereabouts. After that he scarcely expected to see her again, but the next night she was here also."

"Then M. Alfred learned more. Artistic, and she had conceived the idea of painting a picture of the café—an early morning picture of effects, moustaches, undergarments. There was to be the morning sunlight streaming across the supper tables, the faces of all of us aged and haggard. M. Louis here without doubt a very child of the devil! Oh, a very moral picture, monsieur! It was to convert us all. M. Alfred declared that he would arrange to have it here on exhibition, and we should all mend our ways. Monsieur knew perhaps that the young lady was an artist."

The question was dashed suddenly upon him as though the intention was to take him by surprise. Duncome, however, remained unmoved.

"I am here, madame, to ask, not to answer, questions," he said. "Will you kindly proceed? I am greatly interested."

Madame put her hand to her throat for a moment as though to loosen her necklace. She had not the appearance of being greatly to love with her questioner.

"There came a night," she continued, "when mademoiselle broke through her rule. A man came in and sat at her table. His name was the Viscount d'Aubard, and he was known to most of us, though to the young lady he appeared to be a stranger. They talked earnestly for an hour or more. When she left, he accompanied her."

The Englishman had grown pale. Madame saw it and smiled. Her lover, perhaps! It was good to make him suffer.

"Flossie here," she continued, "was outside and saw the departure. They drove off together in the vicomte's coupe. They were apparently on the best of terms. Since then we have not seen her again or the vicomte. Monsieur knows now as much as we know."

"And how long ago is that?" Duncome asked quietly.

"A week tonight," Madame replied. Duncome laid down a roll of notes upon the table.

"I wish," he said, "to prove to you that I am in earnest. I am therefore ready to pay you the amount I promised, although I am perfectly well aware that the story of madame is false."

"Monsieur!"

"As I remarked," he repeated, "false. Now listen to me. I want to tempt one of you, I don't care which, to break through this thieves' compact of yours. I have paid a thousand francs for this. I will pay 10,000 francs for truth. Ten thousand francs for the present whereabouts of Mlle. Phyllis Poynton."

Mlle. Flossie looked up at him quickly; then she glanced furtively at Madame, and the flash of Madame's eyes was like lightning upon blue steel. Duncome moved toward the door.

"I will pay the bill downstairs," he said. "Good night. Think over what I have said. Ten thousand francs."

M. Louis stood up and bowed stiffly. Mlle. Flossie ventured to throw him a kiss. Madame smiled inscrutably.

The door closed. They heard him go down stairs. Madame picked up his card and read aloud:

"Sir George Duncome, Wiley Hall, Norfolk, Grand Hotel, Paris."

"If one could only," Madame murmured, "tell him the truth, collect the money—and—"

"And," Flossie murmured, half fearfully, "M. le Baron smiled."

CHAPTER IX.

Mlle. Mermillion was not warmly welcomed at the Grand hotel. The porter believed that Sir George Duncome came was out. He would inquire if mademoiselle would wait, but he did not usher her into the drawing room, as would have been his duty in an ordinary case, or even ask her to take a seat.

Mlle. Mermillion was of the order of young person who resents, but this afternoon she was far too nervous. During the porter's temporary absence she started at every footstep and generalized anxiously every passerby. Often she looked behind her through the glass doors into the street. When at last he reappeared, his disappointment was obvious.

"Sir George Duncome is out, mademoiselle," he announced. "Will you be pleased to leave a message or your name?"

"You do not know how long he will be," she said. "Sir George left no word," the man answered. "He has been out since before dawn."

Mademoiselle decided to leave a note. The porter supplied her with note paper and envelopes. She sat down at a small round table and once more glanced around. Convinced that she was not being watched, she hastily wrote a few lines, sealed and addressed the envelope and handed it to the porter.

"You will give this to Sir George immediately he returns," she begged. "It is important."

"Monsieur shall have it without doubt, mademoiselle," the man answered.

She pulled down her veil and left the place hurriedly. When she reached the boulevard she glanced her pace and drew a little breath of relief.

"Ten thousand francs," she murmured to herself. "If I too, that with me, they would receive me at home, I might start all over again. It is worth a little risk. Heavens, how nervous I am!"

She entered a café and drank a petit verre. As she set her glass down a man looked at her over the top of his newspaper. She tried to smile, but her heart was beating, and she was sick with fear.

"What a fool I am!" she muttered. "It is a stranger too. If he were one of Gustave's lot, I should know him."

She returned his smile, and he came and sat down beside her. They had another liqueur together. Later they left the place together.

Duncome returned to his hotel tired out after a disappointing day spent in making fruitless inquiries in various parts of Paris. He had learned nothing.

He seemed as far off the truth as ever. He opened the note which the porter handed him listlessly enough. Afterward, however, it was different. This is what he read:

"I can tell you about the young English lady if you will permit me to use your name. You will not believe me, I dare not come here again. I dare not even look to you with the eyes of a stranger. I am in the Café Savoy tonight and will dine in a private room. I will come at half past 7."

Duncome drew a little sick of relief. At last, then, he was to know something. He was very English, a fact which does not make him any less of a man. He had his interest in the girl herself, an interest which seemed to have a hold upon his life—would have kept him here plodding so relentlessly away at a task which seemed daily to present more difficulties and complications. Yet so absorbed had he become that the ordinary duties and pleasures which made up the routine of his life scarcely ever even entered into his mind. There had been men coming down to shoot whom in an ordinary way he would not have dreamed of putting off a card of match which had been postponed until a return and which he had completely forgotten. Paris had nothing in the shape of amusement to offer him in place of these things, yet he had even more than others were as they had not been. Every interest and every mercy of his life were concentrated upon the one simple object of his quest.

He gave the man half a crown and walked to the lift which ran. The porter shook his head, and Duncome regarded considerably in his estimation. He was standing in the lift. He considered Mlle. Flossie a little chivalrous for a gentleman of Duncome's class. Duncome treated himself to a cocktail and a cigarette as he changed his clothes. It was positively the first gleam of hope he had had. And then suddenly he remembered Spence's warning, and he became grave.

He was at the Café Savoy early. He ordered dinner gave elaborate instructions about a young lady whom she arrived and with a glass of sherry and another cigarette he chatted down to wait. At a quarter of 7 he began to get restless. He summoned the waiter again and gave a more detailed description of Mlle. Flossie. The waiter was respectful, but positive. No young lady of any description had arrived expecting to meet a gentleman in a private room. Duncome told him with her name. But, yes, Mlle. Mermillion was exceeding well known there. He would give orders that she should be shown up immediately she arrived. It would be done without doubt.

At a quarter past 8 Duncome dined alone, too disappointed to resent the waiter's sympathetic attitude. At 9 o'clock he returned to the hotel on the chance that a message might have been sent there. He took the English newspapers and wrote letters until midnight. Then he ordered a carriage and drove to the Café Marmora.

He mounted the stairs and passed through the little bar which led into the supper room. M. Alfred came forward, with a low bow.

"You can find me a table, I suppose?" Duncome inquired, in a loud voice. "Where shall I sit?"

M. Alfred shook his head slowly. His hands were outstretched, his manner sad, but resigned.
